Dear Sirs

I find myself writing to you again with reference to the local travellers site on Brookwood lye. This site is large enough at present, part of the new site is already being used and has been for a couple years. So my view is that they have had use of the land without planning consent, so therefor forfeit their right to future consent. I see that the house adjacent Coblands is included in the other allocation. Are the occupants not too happy living next to the travellers site so therefor selling up to assist the affordable housing. We all know that living next to a travellers site is not exciting, who will want to live there.

Regards

Tony Gray
